As it turns out, coffee makes a pretty good replacement for my girlfriend. In fact, if they could just figure out a way to put boobs on a styro-foam cup, I'd be set. On the other hand, Sam doesn't stain or make me shit.

WHAT THE EXPERTS HEARD

"Help me, Momma!" "The fire's in my bones." "Remove the sword from my bowels." "My eyes — give me back my eyes." "Water. I thirst." "I crushed underfoot." "My ski melts." "Oh my God."

the internet heading.

1: DO SOMETHING! Help out at shows, do a zine, staple flyers, ANYTHING! 2: TALK TO YOUR ELDERS; that middle-aged guy with the green hair and patches that works at the library, the owner of your local record store, the bald guy at the shows, HEAR WHAT THEY HAVE TO SAY! They can save you from a lot of shit they've already had to go through, so listen up and learn. If we can do those two things, use technology to our advantage, and avoid becoming rock stars, things WILL get real exciting real quick...

but it's a lot easier to be productive when I'm by myself. If I want to go on tour, I just go. I don't need to arrange a schedule between five people. I don't need to pay for five people, it's just me. It's a lot easier to be very self-reliant and you don't have to deal with anything that comes with having a large group of people.

X: So what's the strangest thing that people have done at your shows?

A: There've been some really funny shows. One in Lawrence Kansas where this band called "Killed in the Face" just ran up when I was playing and just started playing the snare drum and trombone and they were all dressed in costumes and they played a couple songs, and that was pretty strange and awesome. In Redmond there were a few people who dressed up in "Prophets of Atom" t-shirts and had fake beards and signs that said "the package is near." and they were yelling at people and getting rocks thrown at them, which is pretty funny.

X: You actually have a Mad Lib song, right?

A: Uh huh.

X: And Worm Quartet did a version of it. Is this a thing where everyone can do a Mad Lib song and play it?

A: Sure. I definately don't think I'm one who can say "don't play MY song" after ripping off countless people.

X: So there could be a whole bunch of people doing their own Mad Lib songs?

A: In theory that could happen.

X: So we mentioned Shoebox and Worm Quartet earlier. They've been getting airplay on "Dr. Demento." Do you see a bright future for chubby people with synthesizers?

1. I'm not sure if I can do this. I'm not sure if I can do this. I'm not sure if I can do this.

A: haha. I don't know. (Awkward Silence)

X: This is one of those blanket metaphorical questions we ask everybody: The world is nuked. If one album survives, what is it?

A: Do I get to listen to it?

X: Yeah. You're trapped with just this album.

A: Well, I was going to say Public Image Ltd.'s metal box one, because that would be the most protected one, but if I had one record to listen to personally? Am I the only person left?

X: Yes, granted immortality by the nuclear blast.

A: Arg, that would be completely horrible. I'd probably want to have something where you hear new stuff every time you listen to it. It would probably be a Beatles record... Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band.

X: So you covered a Misfits song (Where Eagles Dare) and a Dead Milkmen song (Nutrition) are there other covers in the works?

A: The new album has some covers by a band called the Mountain Goats. I fully endorse them. And there's a Madonna cover.

X: Okay. One show, one band.

A: Carp. Somewhere hot, loud, and with no stage.

X: Last thing. Say something mean to me.

A: Why?

(This is about the point where we started blabbering about how Atom could be mean to me and Ryan, or what we could possibly do to provoke him. It would have taken up too much space to be entertaining.)

11:11 PM 1-15-00 off to work

200 Cigarettes 85149128

I fumbled with the top button of the starched white shirt. My hands trembled with guilty pleasure as I smoothed the shirt over my stomach and pulled up the black slacks from around my knees. There was a strange glow throughout the room, perhaps my actions were actually being smiled upon.

I frowned a bit as I passed the incense burner. I didn't particularly like it at all. In fact, I thought it was a bit absurd. To me, the soul purpose of the incense was to cover the foul "mystery smell" that seems so prevalent in the room of every adolescent male. I shook the thought from my head and continued towards the dresser. Clearing a few stray CDs from the top, I pulled open the top drawer and dug through the pile of socks until my hand emerged with the black silk tie. I smiled and flipped up the collar, tossing the tie over the back of my neck. As I tied it, I glanced over and made eye contact with my favorite Jack Nicholson poster. Head peering through the door, his face twisted in the famous mix of rage and dementia.

That was what I was doing now, I was hacking a big hole in life, sticking my head through, and giving the world a great big "heeeeere's Johnny!" I chuckled a bit at my own metaphor as neatly finishing the knot and flipping my collar down. I made my way back across the room. The computer stuck out from the corner. It was a gaudy mixture of bright blue and white plastic. Shining with the pride that only a 350mhz

X: So how long have you lived in Alameda?

J: Three years.

X: And where did you move here from?

J: I was raised in southern california, but then I moved to the bay area about 8-10 years ago.

X: So Plan 9 just did their last show, and you're still in Fracas.

J: Yeah. We've had a few lineup changes, but we feel we're at our strongest now.

X: Why did Plan 9 break up?

J: The same reason the Misfits did.

X: What's going on with Fracas?

J: Well, we've got a split 7 inch with the Eddie Haskels that should be out soon. Then we're gonna have a new CD out and there's a couple compilations we're probably going to be on. We just did a two week tour, and in August we're going to tour for about a month.

X: How has Alameda and the east bay in general changed since you've been here?

J: I don't know, it's different from San Francisco, like the shows and stuff. In San Francisco they're much older and people aren't quite as excited about stuff. I like Gilman more because people dance and jump around. If they like a band they buy stuff, put stickers and patches on themselves. That's exciting to me, whereas you go to San Francisco and people just stand there with their arms crossed.

processor, DVD, and an ATIRage 128 Graphics Card could provide. But this was all irrelevant as I reached around the machine and pulled off the book that was taped to the back of it.

I giggled with anticipation as I traced my fingers over the raised gold letters- "The Book of Mormon." I took a deep breath, clutching the book to my chest. Pulling another piece of tape off from the back of the book, I freed the named tag and gingerly pinned it onto the shirt.

I read the handwritten words of my home-made name tag out loud; "Elder Tole: Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." I finally bounced over to the mirror to admire myself. Realizing I had made an error, I let down a groan as I pulled the forgotten bike helmet from under the bed and gingerly placed it upon my neatly combed blonde hair, leaving the chin strap unfastened.

As I stood there in the mirror, helmet upon my head, practicing my "Jesus and I love you"s, I was oblivious to the fact that I could never tell my friends. Nor did I think about what my parents would do if they caught me like this, or any of the other prejudices that modern society held towards transreligites. No, at that moment, all I knew was one thing; I was a boy who was happy to spend a Thursday afternoon dressing up like a Mormon.

ALL AGES: REVIEWS

(The majority of the music reviewed in this section is NOT new. I figure that and old album you haven't heard is just the same as a new one. This policy will be discarded as soon as people decide to supply me with free and/or affordable shit to review...)

Yeah, that's what I thought.)

Dead Boys- "All This and More" (1977-78)

I've always wondered why the Dead Boys weren't mentioned in the same breath as the Ramones, Pistols, and Clash. It is said that to really understand just how revolutionary those early bands were, you have to compare them with what was around at the time. I tried this, and those people are absolutely right. Compare the Dead Boys with other punk bands of the time, and you begin to see just how incredible they were.

Replacements- "Sorry Ma, Forgot to take out the Trash" (1981)

Yes, fifteen years before Paul Westerberg sank to the "Singles" soundtrack, we have the debut release from the Replacements. Which, as it turns out, is a damn fine punk album. Whether you're a youngin' looking for a history lesson or an old-timer feeling nostalgic, this one's worth a dust-off and a listen.

Fracas- "Always Drunk and Incapable of Love" (2000)

Reminding everyone that music still, in fact, exists in Alameda, we have Fracas. Like any good hardcore album, "Always Drunk and Incapable of Love" gives you that insatiable urge to break shit. It's also quite cheap: 5 bucks at Axis.

Beat Farmers- "Loud and Plowed and LIVE" (1990)

Are you a Mojo Nixon fan? Have you not heard of the Beat Farmers? Shame on you, asshole! The late great Country Dick Montana co-wrote "Are You Drinkin' With Me Jesus" and the final song on this album, "King of Sleaze," features Mojo helping out with singing. All Nixon fans need to grab this one and prepare for one hell of a ride. Beware! only four or five songs on this CD have Dick doing vocals, the rest are quite classic rock/country-ish.

Toy Dolls- "Dig That Groove Baby" (1983)

What sad sack of shit doesn't love the Toy Dolls? This may have been their best album, with "Nellie The Elephant", "Firey Jack", "Dougy Giro", and without a doubt the best rendition of "Blue Suede Shoes" ever made. Buy it, listen to it, live it, and remember just how much fun Punk Rock can be.

The Queers- "Today" (2001)

The newest EP from Joe Queer & Co. Like pretty much every other Queers release, it's melodic, catchy, juvenile, and a bit raunchy all at the same time; a combination that never fails. "Today" is more or less a sampler of everything the Queers are doing these days, complete with the perennial Beach Boys cover. I'm anxiously awaiting the next Full-Length (I've heard it may be out in the fall?)

Fay Wray- "I Love Everyone" (2000)

I found this Florida band while looking through the No Idea website last summer. I've been hooked ever since. It's basically melodic punk without the ska-ish swingy crap or the emo-ish whiney shit. So, "I love everyone" is pretty much what pop-punk should be. And it gets better every time I listen to it.
